THE SECRETS OF THE AMERICAN HORSE TAMER.
The Buffalo Advertiser intimates that it is cognizant of the peculiar secret possessed by Mr. Rarey, the celebrated horse-tamer now in England, and employed so successfully by him in subjugating the most vicious and unruly of the equine species. The principle, it is thought, is doubtless the same as that now in use by horse-breeders and horse-trainers in various parts of the country, and consists mainly in kind treatment, in subduing the fears of the animal, and accustoming him to unusual noises and objects. But there are other influences, somewhat of a mesmerizing character, and employed as adjuncts, that go to insure the more complete success of the horse-tamer, such as caresses, the use of drugs agreeable to the horse, scratching in parts not easily reached by the animal itself, giving food or water after long abstinence has occasioned hunger or thirst, the careful use of various tones of the human voice, &c.

The chief secret, however, according to the Advertiser, which paper has the authority for its statement from those who understand and practice the art, consists in "raising one of the fore feet of the horse, doubling the knee, and keeping a strap around the fetlock, fastening the foot close to the arm or shoulder. The horse then stands upon three legs. Having next put on a surcingle, pass a long strap or rein through the surcingle, and fastening one end of it around the fetlock of the other fore foot, attach the other to the surcingle after the animal is thrown, so closely as to deprive it of the use of the limb. In this item the treatment may be varied by fastening the second fetlock to the arm or shoulder after the animal is down."

This plan, says the Advertiser, is successfully pursued by many skillful horse-breakers in Western New York, and the horse yields to the necessities of the case—his spirit of opposition is broken.

CHICAGO.—A paragraph recently appeared in a New York paper to the effect that no less than ninety-six thousand three hundred and thirty chattel mortgages had been recorded at Chicago within a comparatively short time. The Chicago Times, noticing the statement, says: "From an examination of the business done in the office, we find the whole amount of instruments filed for record since 1834 up to 1858 to number a little over ninety-seven thousand, and it must be observed that in this number are comprised all maps, bonds, mortgages, contracts, deeds, and all other instruments of every name and nature whatsoever, which the law requires to be made a matter of record. The number of chattel mortgages included in the above is short of eight per cent. upon the whole, and instead of being granted by merchants, who form the business community, we find, upon actual investigation of the schedule of property expressed in the instruments themselves, that they are in the most instances given to secure the purchase money of the goods and chattels which pass by bills of sale between the hard-working and industrious laborer and mechanic."

CUBA.—A Washington correspondent of the New York Journal of Commerce says: "We have heard much and very vaguely of the purpose of our administration in regard to Cuba. It is not improbable that some negotiations looking to the purchase of Cuba may be commenced upon the occurrence of a favorable opportunity. If the object be favored by the governments of France and Great Britain, it is not impossible that it will be accomplished within Mr. Buchanan's time."

A very dangerous counterfeit ten dollar note on the Bank of Commerce, Cleveland, Ohio, is afloat in this city.—Vignette portrait of the Hon. Thos. F. Marshall with spectacles on.

THE "SEA SERPENT CAUGHT."—The following letter, giving an account of the capture of what at first was supposed to be the veritable sea serpent, we copy from the London Times of Feb. 12:

Sir: In your paper of the 5th instant is a letter from Captain Harrington, of the ship Castilian, stating his belief that he had seen the great sea serpent near St. Helena. His confidence is strengthened from the fact of something similar having been seen by her Majesty's ship Dædalus near the same position. The following circumstance, which occurred on board the ship Pekin, then belonging to Messrs. T. and W. Smith, on her passage from Malmuin, may be of some service respecting this "sea-serpentine":

On December the 28th, 1848, being then in lat. 26 S. lon. 6 E. nearly calm, ship having only steerage way, saw about half a mile on port beam a very extraordinary looking thing in the water of considerable length. With the telescope we could plainly discern a huge head and neck, covered with a long shaggy-looking kind of mane, which it kept lifting at intervals out of the water. This was seen by all hands and declared to be the great sea serpent. I determined on knowing something about it, and accordingly lowered a boat, in which my chief officer and four men went, taking with them a long small line in case it should be required.

I watched them very anxiously, and the monster seemed not to regard their approach. At length they got close to the head. They seemed to hesitate, and then busy themselves with the line, the monster all the time ducking its head, and showing its great length. Presently the boat began pulling towards the ship, the monster following slowly. In about half-an-hour they got along side; a tackle was got on the main yard, and it was hoisted on board. It appeared somewhat supple when hanging, but so completely covered with snaky-looking barnacles, about 18 inches long, that we had it come time on board before it was discovered to be a piece of gigantic seaweed, 20 feet long and 4 inches in diameter, the root end of which appeared when in the water like the head of the animal, and the motion given by the sea caused it to seem alive. In a few days it dried up to a hollow tub, and as it had a rather offensive smell was thrown overboard.

I had only been a short time in England when the Dædalus arrived and reported having seen the great sea serpent, to the best of my recollection, near the same locality, and which I have no doubt was a piece of the same weed. So like a huge living monster did it appear that had circumstances prevented my sending a boat to it, I should certainly have believed I had seen the great sea snake.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,
FREDERICK SMITH.
Newcastle-on-Tyne, Feb. 10.

The Mormons at Tom's Island, New Jersey, have a church of about fifty members, built up chiefly by the exertions and influence of a single family. Pursuant to a general order from headquarters in Utah, the house of worship there, as in other places, is closed. The members are much dejected, many having relatives at Salt Lake, for whose fortunes they may well be anxious.

The style of getting the dollar will insure the true method of its use. The fortune meantly gained will be meantly spent; for the plain reason that the same man who degraded himself to obtain his money, unless he becomes a better man, will continue to act from the same low level, and scourge the community worse in the use than in the getting of his wealth.

Good is more esteemed for having been long desired, affection stronger for having been long ungratified.

FOREIGN ITEMS.—The Liverpool Times, in speaking of Lord Palmerston and his new "Conspiracy to Murder Bill," says: "The concession which he has made this week to France does not appear to have diminished his power in the House of Commons, but it has sensibly impaired his standing beyond it, and if we contrast Lord Palmerston's popularity now with what it was this time last year, the truth of our observations will force conviction on the reader's mind."

The reform question will soon engage the attention of the people of England. The Chartists, according to the Liverpool Times, are now disposed to act rationally.

They are willing to co-operate with the middle class reformers in carrying as many points of the charter as they are likely with such aid to secure. So far, the movement in favor of an extended suffrage and the adoption of the ballot includes all the great communities in England, and the people are waiting to see to what extent Lord Palmerston's Government will go in the way of making the popular branch of the Legislature a tolerably correct reflex of the national feeling. If there be no new adjustment of the representation, the scheme will not satisfy that large section of the middle classes that supported the present Premier so strenuously at the last general election. As far as the single electors fit the House of Commons go, the result is decidedly favorable to the reform spirit of the country; for even those who entertain conservative views have been obliged, in deference to the popular sentiment, to veil them under the guise of progressive measures. Considering that there are now no exciting topics to agitate the public mind this earnestness in favor of national advancement is a cheering sign of the times in which we live.

The religious section of the public is not idle. At a meeting of the deputation representing the Protestant Dissenters, petition against church rates and in favor of civil and religious liberty was agreed to. Another petition respecting India was also carried, which prayed that means might be taken to spread religious truth amongst the natives of that country.

A warrant has been issued for the apprehension of Mr. William Young Gooch, London, the well known stock broker, on the charge of having committed forgeries to a large amount in his capacity as broker.

The Prussian Government have sent a circular to the provincial authorities, requesting them to state if they think it would be useful to demand from the Legislature a law prohibiting the sale of distilled drinks by retail.

The town of Nykarleby, in Finland, was lately in great part destroyed by a fire, which lasted nearly three days.

A new attempt is to be made in the Swedish Diet to relax somewhat the rigorous laws against apostasy from the Lutheran or State religion.

It is greatly to be feared that Dr. Leichardt, the Austrian traveler, has shared the fate of Sir John Franklin. Four thousand five hundred pounds have, however, been voted by the Legislature of New South Wales for the expenses of the proposed expedition to search for him. Dr. Gregory has volunteered to conduct it, and he entertains some hope that a statement made by a convict, that Dr. Leichardt is a prisoner in the hands of a tribe of northern aborigines, may be true.

A NEW "TOBACCO QUESTION."—The important question of the possibility of poisoning by cigars impregnated with arsenic has been raised by the recent death, in France, of a priest named Botary, supposed to have been poisoned by another priest. An investigation has been undertaken to ascertain whether it is possible or probable that arsenicated cigars can cause death, by the inspiration of their smoke, impregnated with volatilized arsenic, or by its admission in the saliva without such change; and very important are the conclusions arrived at. "There are four ways," remark the investigators, "in which the introduction of arsenic into the animal economy may be effected through the medium of cigars; by impregnation with a powerful solution of the poison; by its introduction into the candlestick end, or as an impalpable power into the buckle end, so that it may reach and mix with the saliva during smoking, or, finally, in larger quantity, hidden in the central part of the cigar."

"Poisoning is hardly possible in the first or second cases. In the third instance it is inconceivable. It might occur by a combination of two or three of these methods. The question of the formation of the arsenicated bydrogen is not settled." In reading this report, we seem to be transported to the days of the Borgias, when the poisoned taper, falsely bearing the motto "allis inserviendo consumor," destroyed other existences in sacrificing its own; and when the flowers of the ball-room were scented with alien and lethal perfumes. It is well to be assured that these fabled horrors are also impossibilities. The mere suggestion of this most "deleterious so phistication" of tobacco must carry alarm and discomfort to the soul of any rich uncle in the habit of smoking his favorite neighbor's cigars; while for our modern blowers of anti-lasts to tobacco it furnishes a patent and effective insinuation. This report, however, practically negatives the possibility of such a crime being successfully perpetrated; since it is only in those cases where the impalpable powder is made to mix with the saliva, in other words, where detection is almost inevitable, that this detestable expedient could be effectively employed.

ADVANTAGEOUS TO KNOW.—Many a death has resulted from an accident, when a little skill in the treatment of a wound might have proved a service of life. In the excitement attendant upon the injury of a fellow being, we are too apt to lose the presence of mind necessary to a proper consideration of means by which relief can be rendered; and the necessity of making ourselves perfectly familiar with the manner in which wounds and injuries should be treated in cases of emergency, for the knowledge of the proper means to be adopted for the stoppage of bleeding from a wound, may be of service to us when we least expect it.

First, if the blood flows out in a stream, notice particularly whether the stream is an even, steady, or a jerking or pulsating stream; if it is even and steady, the probability is it is from a vein, particularly if the color of the blood is a dark red. Bleeding from an artery is peculiar, the blood being of a light scarlet color; the stream comes in that jerking manner which is seen when a fire engine is playing upon a high building. To stop the flow of blood in a vein, first close the wound with the hand firmly, then fold up any cloth, tow, flax, or leather, make it into a hard pad, and press it at least large enough to cover the entire wound, bind over this firmly any bandage, handkerchief, or strap, or even the bark of a tree; raise the wounded part higher than the body of the patient; keep him quiet; if he has bled a large quantity, give him (if at hand) a little spirits and water and send for the doctor. If the bleeding is from an artery, take your handkerchief, tie it around the limb between the wound and the heart, put a strong stick under the handkerchief, give it two or three twists, and you will stop the blood, if you have made it tight enough. In all other respects the same treatment as above.

In all small wounds, merely elevating the part higher than the body and retaining it so for a short time will arrest the bleeding.

For bleeding at the nose, apply ice to any part of the body, moving the ice around; it is best to apply it to the arm-pits, nape of the neck, &c. Keep the patient quiet; do not let him cough, &c., or bleeding will return.

AMERICAN INSTITUTIONS.—Whatever the Americans are proud of—whatever they consider to be peculiarly good, useful, brilliant, or characteristic of themselves or their climate—they designate half in jest, though scarcely half in earnest, as an "institution." Thus the memory of Gen. Washington—or "Saint" Washington, as he might be called, considering the homage paid to him—is an institution; the Falls of Niagara are an institution; the Plymouth Rock, on which the Pilgrims first set foot, is an institution, as much so as the Blarney Stone in Ireland, to which an eloquent Irish orator, at a public dinner, compared it, amid great applause, by affirming that the Plymouth Rock was the "Blarney Stone of New England." Sweet potatoes are an institution; and pumpkin (or pumpkin pie) is an institution; canvas-back ducks are an institution; Bunker's Hill is an institution; and the firemen of New York a great institution.—Charles Mackay.

The world is a treadmill which turns all the time, and leaves us no choice but to sink or to swim.

A MARONITE CONVENT AT LEBANON.—The Beirut (Syria) correspondent of the Boston Traveller says:

The convent of Bekere is memorable for having been founded by the notorious Hendye, a young Maronite dandy, whose crimes were as romantic as they were diabolical. Her extraordinary way of life attracted general attention. She fasted, wore hair cloth, had the gift of tears, and was thought by this ignorant and superstitious sect to be a saint; it was even rumored that she wrought miracles, and eventually it was fully believed; but they were mirages of crime.

Aspiring to found a new order of monks, she appealed to her parishioners for the necessary funds to build a convent, which at once came pouring in, in such abundance, that she was able to erect large buildings of hewn stone, which cost $25,000, and Bekere was alive with monks and nuns, over whom the Patriarch was supreme director. Priests and candidates for the holy office were established in one of the mansions, while monks and nuns occupied the others. For some time all seemed to go on prosperously, though occasionally some of the nuns died rather strangely, which, however, was ascribed to the evil spirit of Hendye, whose sanctity a superstition never failed. Like a sovereign he had reigned over her little kingdom for nearly 20 years, the wonder of her sect for her superior piety and unknown mortification, when an accident occurred which threw all into confusion. An agent of this city (Beirut) happened to be going to Damascus some summer, when he was overtaken by the night near the convent. The gates being shut, he laid himself down on a bed of straw in an outer court.

After sleeping a few hours, he was awake by the sudden noise of bolts drawn and doors opening, from one of which three women emerged, with spades and shovels in their hands, while two men followed, carrying a long white bundle, which appeared to the agent to be heavy. Proceeding to an adjoining piece of ground, the bearers laid down their burden, and dug a hole in which they deposited their load, and then, covering it with earth, trod it down with their feet, when all retired silently and solemnly as they came.

The strange sight which an hour awakened the agent's suspicions, and hurrying back to Beirut before morning, he informed another merchant, who, a few months before, had placed his two daughters here, each having a portion of $2,000. The father was alarmed, remarking that many of the nuns had died, and one of his own daughters, as he knew, was unwell. Mounting his horse, he proceeded to the convent, and asked to see his daughters, which was refused upon the pretence that they were sick. He insisted, and was sternly refused, which only convinced him the more that foul play was going on. In madness and despair he hurried away to Deir-el-Kammar, an important town at some distance, at which the Governor resided, who, upon hearing the story, ordered a company of horse to attend the unhappy father back to the convent, and break its doors open, if admittance was refused. The Cadi, or Judge, also joined the party, and gave his aid, in whose presence, and that of the horsemen, armed and ready for their work, all hearts in the convent failed, and the doors were at once opened.

Repeating to the spot where the mysterious scene occurred in the night, the ground was opened, and in the human form which was revealed, whom should the Beirut merchant recognize at the first glance but his own daughter! The other he found alive, but near to death, who revealed some of the abominable scenes of wickedness enacted in the convent, which almost petrified those who heard them, and to which she was about to fall a victim like her sister.

Upon subsequent examination it was found that Hendye sometimes destroyed her nuns to obtain their property, and sometimes because they were not sufficiently obedient to her commands, while revolting scenes were disclosed, which are not to be named or described. Among other things she did, she consecrated the host and said mass; and, causing holes to be made under her bed, introduced perfumes through them, and lay in pretended trance.

She also claimed to be the Virgin Mary, returned to the earth. Being arrested by the civil authorities, she stood firm; and when imprisoned in several convents, she always managed to escape, and to the last retained a strong party on her side, playing the hypocrite to the hour of her death. Such was the pretended sanctity of her character, that the Maronites to this day revere her memory, and for her sake perform penances and mortifications, thinking she was a very saint.

IMPORTANT FROM WASHINGTON.—The New York Herald's correspondent says: During the discussion of the appointment of Mr. Cook as postmaster of Chicago, Mr. Douglas, it is reported, declared on his word of honor that Cook was personally and politically dishonest, and a man of neither reliability nor character for any position under the Government.

The Tribune correspondent says: It is well understood here in the most intimate circles of the President's friends that, immediately on the adjournment of Congress, Mr. James Gordon Bennett will receive his commission as U. S. Minister to Austria. This will be the simple fulfillment of one of the conditions on which the New York Herald gives its support to the Administration.

The Times' correspondence says: The select committee on the Matteson case announced to-day, is considered very friendly to him. The majority of him are already committed against expulsion.

Controlling Her Temper.—The husband of a lady of fiery temper says that before their marriage he was wained of her fiery disposition, and, to test the accuracy of the information, one evening, as he sat next to her at dinner, he managed cleverly to jog the servant's elbow, as a plate of mock turtle soup was offered her, which of course was upset over the young lady's white dress of tulle lace. No complaint, not even a frown, being evinced, the delighted suitor concluded that what he had heard was a mistake, and the marriage took place; but soon the lady's real character displayed itself, as is always the case after marriage, but never before, and his wife, like a human Stromboli, was subject to fiery eruptions every ten minutes upon an average. "How is it, my dear," said the happy husband, "that, having such a bad temper, you stood the ordeal by soup so well?" "Why," answered the lady, "I may have appeared indifferent at the time, but good heaven! you should have only gone into my room a little while afterwards and seen the marks of my teeth on the bed-post!"

To Catch Rats.—When a house is infested by rats which refuse to nibble at toasted cheese and the usual baits, a few drops of the highly scented oil of rhodium, poured on the bottom of a cage trap, will almost invariably attract it full of the "mischievous rodents' before morning. We have known this to be tried with the most extraordinary success. Where a trap, baited with all manner of edibles, had failed to attract a single rat, the oil of rhodium caused it to be completely crowded night after night, until the house was cleared of the noisome visitors. The same oil of rhodium is used by some keepers of rat pits, who, when their hands are smeared with it, do not hesitate to take the animals up by the dozen out of bags, fearless of bites.

They who read about everything are thought to understand everything too, but it is always so. Reading furnishes the mind only with the material of knowledge; it is thinking that makes what we read ours. We are of the ruminating kind, and it is not enough to cram ourselves with a great load of collections—we must chew them over again.

A NOVEL CELEBRATION.—A letter from Malta, of February 6th, says: "This being the nineteenth anniversary of St. Paul's shipwreck in Malta, grand preparations are making to celebrate it, consisting principally of fireworks and illuminations, which are to continue from the 6th to the 10th."

Several instances of Mrs. Mansfield's success with her patients have become somewhat circulated within a few days, and even an increased interest has been manifested. One case was of a lady who had been openly told by her physicians that she could not hope to recover, as medicine would not reach her disease. Under Mrs. Mansfield's treatment however she has been able to take rest and to sleep, and also to relish her food, which has not been the case before for a long time. The accounts of this and other similar successes naturally arouse no little feeling among sufferers and their friends. Mrs. Mansfield's stay at the Galt House is now extended to Friday.

Benj. Pike and Wm. Pike, disorderly conduct. Bail in $300 each for six months. Workhouse.

Steamer Plant not Sunk.—The St. Louis papers contradict the report of the sinking of the steamer Plant at Wolf Island.

Steamer Stephen Decatur Raised.—This boat, which was sunk last month near Memphis, has been raised by the submarine No. 8. Her cargo of 500 tons was also raised, and will be forwarded to Cincinnati. The Decatur will probably be taken to Paducah for repairs.

We are indebted to Messrs. Lowry and Wilkes, of the splendid steamer James Montgomery, for favors. The Alvin Adams will arrive at Portland at 6 o'clock this evening.

THEATRE.—We are to have the splendid equestrian spectacle of Mazeppa or the Wild Horse of Tartary again this evening, and, as it will be withdrawn at the close of the week, those who have not seen its gorgeous scenery and exciting incidents, should not fail to embrace the earliest opportunity. Karmel the Scout will be played to-night, in addition, for the last time, as other novelties are in preparation.

Miss J. M. DAVENPORT.—We are gratified to learn that this superb artist will be the next "star" at the theatre. This will be her first visit to Louisville, but her fame precedes her, and many of our citizens have seen her in other places, all of whom pronounce her performances chaste and impressive in the very highest degree.

The charter election in Chicago took place on Tuesday and resulted in the success of the Republican ticket by an average majority of 1,300. Mr. Haines was elected Mayor over Mr. Brainard. Seven Republicans and three Democrats were elected aldermen.

BY TELEGRAPH.

Reported for the Evening Bulletin.

XXXVTH CONGRESS—FIRST SESSION.

Thursday's Proceedings.

WEDNESDAY, March 4.

Senate.—Mr. Stuart reported adversely on the bill amending the act of March 3, 1853, granting bounty lands to certain soldiers, &c.

House.—The Speaker announced the first business to be Mr. Hoard's resolution asking for a select committee to examine into the charges of executive influence upon the action of members, the question pending being: Shall the resolution be entertained as a question of privilege?

Mr. Hoard proposed an amendment charging, on his own authority and common fame, the President with endeavoring to control the action of the House on the Lecompton constitution by executive patronage.

Mr. H. Marshall suggested a postponement for a month.

Mr. Burnett objected to a postponement, and said that it was due to Mr. Burns, the member implicated, that he should have a hearing now. The charge was baseless and contemptible, and intended to injure the Democratic party as well as Mr. Burns.

Mr. Hoard said he had twice disclaimed personal liability.

Mr. Burns sent up a written statement charging that Hoard intended to make a false and slanderous record against him, and that he shall hereafter treat Hoard and his slang with the contempt they merit in the estimation of all honorable men. He urged denied collusion with the President or Cabinet as to his vote. Nothing of the kind had occurred, directly or indirectly.

New York, March 4.

Commodore Mathew C. Perry, of the U. S. Navy, died at his residence in this city this morning. The deceased entered the Navy in 1809 and has consequently been nearly half a century attached to the service.

The U. S. steamer Dispatch is fitting out at Brooklyn Navy Yard with unusual expedition for sea.

The U. S. steam frigate Niagara is expected to sail for England on Saturday to take part in laying the Atlantic telegraph cable.

WASHINGTON, March 3.

The Kansas investigating committee met to-night, all the members being present. Gen. Calhoun sent in a statement relative to Kansas affairs, but it was decided it should not be considered as evidence.

Mr. Stephens read a report expressive of the views of the majority, setting forth, among other things, that, as authority was legally conferred on the delegates to the convention to frame a constitution, those who had an opportunity but who declined to vote, are debarred from finding fault with the action of the convention. The report also reviews the position of Messrs. Stanton, Walker, and Douglas, and maintains that they are inconsistent in their present course.

Resolutions were passed with the view of obtaining information relative to the census and other documentary evidence, to accompany the
